The HWC was formed in Albuquerque in 1988 to “promote, support, and create opportunities for Hispanic Women.” Local women came together to help each other advance in their professions, increase the number of women participating in policy-making and serve as role models for other women. Each woman in the HWC has her own story of success and accomplishment, and many of these have been captured in the book, Mujeres Valerosas, published by the HWC in 2000. Join us for readings from the book and discussion about the HWC. Several of the women in the book will be present for the discussion and book signing.

Event is sponsored by the National Hispanic Cultural Center's History & Literary Arts Program in collaboration with UNM Center for Regional Studies
